Among the new features for the week at Telharmonic Hall two will be of special interest to all musical people. The use of different dynamo currents in illustration of the building of tone qualities of different orchestral instruments is now carried from one instrument to another, flute to oboe, progressively built until the many added vibrations produce the violin tone. No person interested in either the wonders of electricity, the beauty of scientifically pure music or the picturesque mysteries of the day should miss these recitals and demonstrations.

Montgomery and Stone and their merry cohorts have entered the sixth month of their run at the Knickerbocker in "The Red Mill."
