Music Menu for Hotel Diners.

Of the wonders of Telharmonic Hall, at Thirty-ninth street and Broadway, the one that impressed the crowd most deeply last night was the actual playing to outside gatherings when the regular recital was in progress before the audience. Two large switches on the stage, in plain sight, connected the music circuits with a dozen of New York's leading hotels, including the Waldorf-Astoria and Sherry's, and musical selections were switched to those places for the pleasure of diners. A source of amazement in the hall was the strange process of building a violoncello tone as one might put together the elements of housewife's recipe.
